USL MEN'S STYLE

MUST HAVES FOR MEN'S CLOSETS

BY STYLIST
Michael Andrew

When purchasing items that compliment your style it's important to remember that fit and proportion are much more important than brand. You could spend thousands of dollars on a piece that is ill fitting, while the next man went to the thrift store or the tailor and put your look to shame. So I would advise all men to be careful when going out to buy clothes for trends. Instead, buy classic pieces that represent who you are. because they only get better with time.

One Great Blazer

One great fitting blazer say, "even when I'm blending in I always stand out." If you have the money, Bespoke (something custom made and hand tailored just for you) starts at around $2,000. If you're balling on a budget, Suitsupply, Mens Wearhouse and Jos A Bank have high stylings for about $200 to $400.

One silk cable-knit or cotton sweater say, "it's a wonderful life." If you have the money, Tom Ford, the arbiter of sexy, creates beautiful clothes period. If you have $30,000 or $40,000 to invest, he can cover all of these categories, but the reason, I would tell you to purchase his sweater is because he mixes delicate and attuned construction to a strong masculine presence like no one else can. When you put on a Tom Ford sweater, you feel cool literally and figuratively. If you are balling on a budget, Uniqlo has unique and very interesting selections of color and simplistic designs, that allow you to ease into the season effortlessly.

One Silk Cable-Knit Or Cotton Sweater

One Great Leather Jacket

One Great leather jacket says; "it does not matter whom you said I was supposed to be..." If you have the money, John Varvatos, the classic American Luxury brand, always has amazing leather and suede outwear that you will keep forever starting at $1,000. Belstaff, an iconic company that began making bags, has traditional approaches to contemporary design at around $695, especially in its outwear. They are sure to have people hating

One Statement Piece Or Accessories

One statement piece or accessories say, "why would you want to be me when you do you so well?" A statement piece is your thing and could range from the ridiculously expensive $100,000 watch or ring to something completely inexpensive, as a Navajo woven bracelet you got in Arizona for $3. It's what is unique to you. For me, it is hats, and slippers for the spring. My hats are custom made and can range from $150 to $300 and my slippers, which are currently procured from Stubbs and Wootton are around $495. However, accessories like my tie belts or scarves; usually cost around $3-$5 from the thrift stores.

One Well Fitting Dress Shirt

One well fitting dress shirt (including a proper collar) says, "I'm ready for the world!" If you have the money, buy the custom fit shirts or get them custom made. There is nothing better than having a shirt with the proper proportions, made just for you, with your own pattern and style. Shirts are not crazy expensive to make, this is a great way to get a taste of quality clothing, look and feel, starting $300. If you are balling on a budget, B. Oyama, a designer in NYC who has great designs, different collar lengths, slim and regular cuts; that are important when it comes to proportions, starts at around $175.

One Excellent Pair of Flat Front Lightweight Wool Pants

One excellent pair of flat front lightweight wool pants says, "I'm about business!" If you have the money, Brunello Cucinelli is my choice. Most all his fabrics are cashmere that allude to luxury and affluence and are extremely comfortable to wear. Note: If you're only buying one pair at around $900, wear them sparingly because his fabric is delicate and can begin pulling. If you're balling on a budget, Eredi Pisano, a cool Italian brand in NYC, elicits the cool "businessman" out of any patron who puts on their clothing. Their price point can be on the higher side, but they always have great sales starting at $300.

Converse Allstars

One Pair of Athletic Inspired Shoe

One pair of athletic inspired shoe say, "I still know how to play the game!" If you have the money, Tod's, which is known for it's driving shoes than the leather sneaker options, often go un-noticed but leather sneakers help keep a casual look, upscale and cool. So Tod's do start at around $400. If you're balling on a budget, Converse low tops, at around $65, are a great way to create a casual urbane look for the spring and summer days. You can also wear sneakers without socks, which say, "I'm winning the game, so I do not have to play so.

No Pitty For The FRIEND ZONED!

Article By Chris Mobley

You hear it all of the time. Guys saying things like "She says that she's looking for a nice guy, and I'm a really nice guy, why doesn't she want me?" or "She says she likes me because I'm nice, kind and sweet, and she wishes she could find a guy like me. So why does she make me just a friend and dates the assholes?" You also hear females saying stuff like "Oh my god, I know I'm hot, why does he act like he's not interested?" or "Why does every guy I date always expect to have sex on the first date?" There are different names for this. For males it's called the friend-zone, in the women's case, it can either be the friend-zone or the sex-zone, where the only thing guys look for in you is sex. Contrary to popular belief amongst the friend-zoned and sex-zoned, there are pretty good reasons why you might find yourself in these situations and why you should nobody should pity you for it.

Most guys say all the time that their love interest "Always says she's looking for someone nice, but she always goes for the douche-bag and keeps me in the friend-zone." Okay, while women do look for a guy who can be nice, sweet, sensitive and caring, that can also lead to your downfall while pursuing this certain female. The reason that women put you in the friend-zone when you tried your best to be the nicest guy you can be is simply because you are just too nice. You being so nice and understanding all of the time almost makes it seem like you use kindness to compensate for your lack of a backbone. Or at least that's how she sees it. For example, you have a new hot girl that you are trying to hook up with, and you regularly talk on the phone with her. She frequently talks about her ex and how much of an asshole he is and probably spends at least 30 minutes out of the whole conversation talking about how bad the men in her past were. Now here comes the part where you end up putting yourself in the friend-zone. In the middle of the conversation, she says something like "Oh, you like MMA (mixed martial arts)? My ex-boyfriend trained MMA, and he was such a douche." That is usually when you should kind of ask why the guy was a douche and if she wants to talk about it. Now if you let her tell the story, then end up letting her ramble on and on about all the different things the ex-boyfriend did for about a whole hour, then congratulations, you just became that friend who is a really good listener. Instead of just listening, either 10 minutes into the story or as soon as she named the act that makes her ex-boyfriend such a bastard, you should stop and say something like "Yea, that guy really is a douche, but you shouldn't even think about him anymore, just know I wouldn't do that." It's best if you just don't even let her get into talking about exes until you know you're not going into the friend-zone by letting her know that she should be focusing more on how good of a boyfriend you are by not letting her even think about her ex while she's having a conversation with you. Because, a woman wants a man who is going to be able to handle to situation and defend her (even if she can handle herself) if a guy decides to disrespect her in front of you, whether its a random jerk or her ex. She puts you in the friend-zone for being that super nice, friendly, really good listener because in that type of situation, just letting the guy disrespect her without harsh retaliation and the only thing you can do is listen to her talk about it later really isn't worth a damn.

If you are a female and wondering why a guy only wants to have sex or, sex is the first and only thing on the minds of men that you date, even though you try your best not to provoke, and then it might be because you are boring or because you are teasing and just don't want to admit it. Now to be fair, if you decide to meet the guy for coffee and within five minutes he's trying to grope you even though you never mentioned sex or anything and probably told him to stop already, then he's a pig. If you invite a man over to your house to talk at a reasonable hour and try to have a decent conversation, but he can't even concentrate because he's looking at your body the whole time, even though you have on a turtle neck, then he might be a horn-dog. But, if you call a man at 10:30 at night saying that you are bored, or sad, or lonely, and when he shows up, you don't say anything worth having a conversation about, you say that you don't want to go out and do anything, you just sit there on the couch looking dumb despite all of his efforts to try to find something worthwhile to do or talk about besides sex. Guess what is going to be on his mind? BINGO! Sex for 200 points! Now if the guy tries to force himself on you or rape you, then yes you have every right to knee him in the crotch and kick him out. But if after doing everything I name in the past few sentences, and the guy genuinely tried his best to not try to instantly bring up sex before finally getting bored and fed up with the awkward silence and said "Why don't you come a little bit closer?" or "Do you want to cuddle up under the blanket?" then you really can't blame the guy nor be mad at him for it. The fact is (assuming that the guy isn't captain pervert) that if you had agreed to go out with him or at least tried to have an interesting conversation with him, he would have talked to you for hours without even thinking about sex (trust me ladies it does work). The same thing goes for first dates. If don't want a guy to constantly hint at having a little "hot coffee" at the end of the night or constantly trying to feel you up for the entire date, try to ask questions and talk about something that will have be interesting and make him want to talk about something besides sex. I mean seriously, if the guy asked you out on the date a few days prior to the actual date, then you should be able to think of some better questions than "So what's your favorite color?" or "So do you ever watch Mob Wives?"

Now to address the "friend-zoned" guys who always want you to feel sorry for them. The ones who want you to believe that the girl is a heartless stupid bitch and the guys that she dates are douche-bags. The true fact is that this guy really isn't any better than the so-called "douche-bag". Now this guy may be super sweet and nice to the girl and do a lot of favors, but let's look at this for what it really is. The lonely friend-zoned guy will do the girl who friend-zones him major favors as well loan her money all the time, even though he rarely ever does this for his guy friends or regular female friends. Why? Because he feels like by doing all of these favors, one day the girl is going to "realize" that she owes him sex or at least a date for everything he has done. These types of guys always complain about how, the next guy is going to be an asshole and is openly more cautious than the female. Even if the girl he's in the friend-zone with has a decent guy, he will constantly try to give her reasons to break up with him or second-guess the relationship. He will blow every small thing his rival does out of proportion to make the girl see something wrong with the situation. He might go as far as to say crazy things like "He said he's having a guys night out? Didn't he have one of those 3 months ago? What does he do on his guy's night out? Play video games? I'm just saying this as a friend, but he should care more about you than the stupid video games and douche-bag friends." Now does that sound kind of irrational? It doesn't matter to this particular brand of friend-zone guy, because not only does he think, he knows, hell he's even counting on the new boyfriend being the douche-bag who really hurts his female friend so that he can play the "nice guy who she never gave a chance" swoop in while she's vulnerable, and get what he's been wanting all of time. Now I'm saying that every guy in the friend-zone is like this, but for the guys who are like the asshole that was described above, who uses favors and money to buy the affection of his crush and waits for some guy to hurt the poor girl so that he can take advantage while she's vulnerable, you are no better than the true douche-bags who leave the girl hurt. By the way, women in the friend-zone can be guilty of this also. So just let that sink in.

So there you have it folks, two reasons why you might get friend-zoned and an example of the worst type of friend-zoned person you can be. It's never good to be in the friend-zone. Sometimes it can be heartbreaking. But sometimes, it might be your own fault that you are in the friend-zone. So the best advice for the friend-zoned guys and sex-zoned females: Have a backbone and assert yourself, try to actually be interesting and for the love of god, if you find yourself in the friend-zone after more than a couple of months, just let the person go instead of constantly hoping that they will get their heart broken so you can get your opportunity.

"MOST GUYS SAY ALL THE TİME THAT THEİR LOVE İNTEREST "ALWAYS SAYS SHE'S LOOKİNG FOR SOMEONE NİCE, BUT SHE ALWAYS GOES FOR THE DOUCHE-BAG AND KEEPS ME İN THE FRİEND-ZONE."

NFL Punishes Players Busted for Weed Harder Than One Who Beat His Fiancée Until She Blacked Out

By Josh Kilburn

Ray Rice got off with a two game suspension for abusing his fiancee, but here are six players who weren't so lucky -- simply because they smoked weed.

Assaulting your fiancee is a-okay with the NFL, but smoking weed is a huge no-no.

Following the arrest of Ray Rice Thursday for assaulting his fiancee in February, the NFL issued a very harsh punishment: A two game suspension for violating the league's personal conduct policy. For the record, Rice allegedly hit Janay Palmer (now his wife) with enough force to make her lose consciousness, and then was caught by security cameras dragging her out of an elevator in Atlantic City.

The aggravated assault charges were dropped against him (allegedly, Palmer assaulted Rice, too; that's going to be a successful and long-lived marriage), and the two later held a bizarre joint press conference that addressed the whole incident.

As Mother Jones reports, though, many are still throwing flags on the play. While the league supposedly goes the distance to project a family-friendly, squeaky-clean reputation, the folks decrying the punishment handed down to Rice Thursday as "too soft" point towards six other players who received harsher punishments than Rice, for the grave immoral sin of smoking weed:

Josh Gordon, Cleveland Browns: As a repeat offender (he tested positive for marijuana earlier in 2014), Gordon's second positive test led to him being suspended for the entire 2014 season. (The NFL will usually suspend first-time offenders for four games, while second-time offenders can get a year and multiple offenders can get banned for life.)

Daryl Washington, Arizona Cardinals: Suspended for the 2014 season after testing positive for marijuana.

Von Miller, Denver Broncos: Suspended for four games in 2013 after testing positive for marijuana, which is legal in the Broncos' home state of Colorado.

Walter Thurmond, Seattle Seahawks: Suspended for four games in 2013 after testing positive for "substance abuse" (NFL's term), with the substance in question likely marijuana-also legal in the state of Washington.

Brandon Browner, New England Patriots: Suspended for all of 2013 and for four games in 2014 for testing positive for marijuana, and was threatened with a lifetime ban.

Will Hill, New York Giants: Suspended for six games for 2014, and suspended for four games in 2013 after testing positive for "substance abuse" (again, almost certainly marijuana).

Despite the numerous calls for the NFL to slacken its marijuana punishments, the conservative league isn't likely to make any sort of meaningful move anytime soon.

Really though, I don't remember any ads starring presidents, and crappy, trippy versions of popular 80' s cartoons warning kids about the dangers of spousal abuse, do you? Priorities, folks, priorities. We can't let the dangers of weed undermine our society; NFL athletes are role models! It's job of women to avoid being abused, and the job of society to clean up the vermin-infested dystopian wastelands marijuana creates.

And the NFL knows that, thus explaining their current PR disaster.

GET FIT With JD JACOME

How important is health, fitness, eating right and looking good?

Eating healthy and maintaining my health is very important to me. About 15 years ago I started working out. At that time, I just wanted to look and feel better about myself. So, I found a gym and started exercising. It was really hard at first. And I didn't see the results right away so I wanted to quit. But I kept going until finally I decided that me having the body I want is a decision I have to take seriously. It's not easy. It's work; a lot of work. This isn't a hobby for me, it's my lifestyle. I love feeling good about myself and the progress I've made. I love sharing the things I've learned with people that are just starting out. I know what feeling is and I love when I can do something to help others feel better about themselves.

What is your daily workout regiment?

My daily workout regimen consist of 45 minutes to 2 hours depending of the muscle group I will workout. I usually do a 15 minute warm-up followed by short but intense routines and I workout my abs while resting between sets. I repeat this 6 times per week. To compliment my workouts, I try to eat everyday; 5-6 complete meals based on the intensity, activity and calories I plan to burn that day.

WORK-OUT TIPS

Any tips you care to share about working out?

I know how difficult it can seem at the beginning in seeing the results of ones labor. The changes are small, but they come as long as you have consistency and moderation. First thing to understand is that everyone's body is different and you have to find excercises that you enjoy doing. If you like to ride your bike; bike more. If you like to swim; start swimming regularly. It's good to set realistic goals rather than drastic changes. Small goals will keep you from getting discouraged and help keep you motivated. I always suggest that beginners should start making small changes in their diet and write down a dietary plan and a workout schedule. Put it on your calendar and cross off the days that you stayed on track. It very quickly becomes a reminder of what the goal is and how dedicated you've been in achieving it. Focusing on the calendar and not the mirror will make your change more obtainable and create the state of mind you want about fitness.

BEST FEATURES

Im confident but nice. Im intelligent and well educated, mature and respectful. I think my best features are my eyes, legs and glutes. I'm very proud of my legs. For some reason it's the hardest muscle group for men to workout. I saw changes slow but with consistency and hard work they just took off.

WHAT'S NEXT

With modeling Im looking into more editorial and fitness projects as well as fine arts. Im working on a calendar and a website, as well. However, my main focus for the past few years has been marketing and advertising various products, businesses and services. I've built ads and campaigns for several businesses when I was living in Los Angeles. And I'm always grateful for new opportunities. YOU SHOULD VISIT WHEN IN TOWN

Chef Rob's Upscale Lounge
5920 Rosewell Road, Atlanta

Chef Rob's Upscale Lounge created and ran by celebrity chef Chef Rob Gayle is on my list of places to go in and around Atlanta. The Sandy Springs bar/lounge gives tastemakers and professionals throughout the city a unique experience. With a menu of assorted Caribbean tapas, cocktails, top-shelf choices, hookah, and signature wine selections, there is something for everyone. The alluring ambiance featuring contemporary furnishings plays host to an assortment of exclusive events, private mixers and social activations attended by industry influencers.

For the cigar connoisseurs, this swanky 1920s underground speakeasy experience sets the bar for the exclusive after dinner grown and sexy vibe. The cigar lounge of lounges… Prohibition is not a member's only establishment, but guests can only enter by securing the evening's password. This password (telephone number) must be entered into the dial on the phone inside an antique phone booth that opens once access is granted. With a full bar and late night menu showcased in a recipe book, passed down from generations, Prohibition is a must on the list of places to experience in Atlanta.

CZAR Bar
56 East Andrews Drive

Czar Ice Bar is a Vodka Bar experience like no other, tucked away in the heart of Buckhead. Offering the 300+ Vodkas of the world, this tucked away destination for Atlanta tastemakers provides the perfect blend between bar and lounge. Patrons can sit and literally "be cool" with an exotic vodka cocktail at a 4" thick and 27' long solid ice bar top. Featuring a full sushi menu created by the world acclaimed master sushi chef, Chef Saito Saito, CZAR Bar caters itself to the want-to-be-seen and not-want-to-be seen locals and visitors alike.

CRUZADO's Café and Lounge
366 5th Street

Cheers ... Where everybody knows your name! This is one of my new favorite spots. The coziness, location, and nightly vibe make Cruzado's Café and Lounge the place to go to just unwind, relax and mix and mingle with a great diverse group of Atlantans. The experience begins upon entry with the visually pleasing interiors done by Danto Designs designer, Danny Tovar. Offering some of the best Hookah in the city and a full bar with a Cuban/Caribbean twist, the experience is a city's one of a kind. Seating no more than 40-50 people at one time, this is the perfect place for a low key evening in the city.

_The Glenn Hotel
110 Marietta Street, NW

Located in the heart of downtown Atlanta, this boutique hotel gives you charm and comfort with top notch service. From the lounge known as The Living Room to the acclaimed Glenn's Kitchen offering a seasonal American cuisine with a Southern flair, The Glenn tops off at the SkyLounge rooftop bar with one of-a-kind views of the Atlanta skyline. The Glen also __offers a compelling experience in the heart of a happening city. Its new "Stay With A Friend" campaign sums up the entire experience... comfortable, familiar and very welcoming!

YOUNG ENTREPENEURS BRİNG LİVE MUSİC İNDUSTRY İNTO THE NEW AGE!

Since it's takeoff in April 2011, Musicalize has become the fastest growing live music showcase event in the UK, with audiences averaging at 3,000 and a collective social network following of over 50,000. Having previously hosted events with performances from the likes of Ciara, Ed Sheeran, Lil' Kim and Professor Green, Musicalize is firmly becoming a name to be known in the music industry.

Already successful from a young age, founders Ben and Sophie Anderson wanted a new venture; holding an esteemed position at one of the UK's largest banks, Ben wanted to pursue his true passion, live music and his talent for discovering new talent.

After graduating from Kingston University with a 1st in English and Performing Arts, Sophie had founded her own dance studio, which 5 years on now has four studios operating across London. With her life's motto "You Get What You Put İn" and the success of her first business, Sophie set out looking for her next and found it in Musicalize, alongside husband Ben.

With the strength of the brand they created alongside their determination and professionalism, Musicalize has rapidly become known for putting on great events. Musicalize also prides itself in providing a launching platform for breakthrough unsigned artists. By giving away the prime position of supporting headline acts, these artists get the opportunity to be officially introduced to the music industry and also to audiences.

This year, Musicalize will be looking forward to hosting their biggest events yet with their plans to produce concerts at the Wembley Arena and The O2 Arena in London and international concerts in the US, Dubai and Canada. -Ana Vitorino / Beau PR & Events

AUTHOR C. KEITH CARPENTER NEW PARANORMAL NOVEL "THE GHOSTS OF EMILY GRAY"

The story follows Erin, the surviving identical twin of Emily who was tragically killed exactly one year ago. Multiple apparitions of the dead teen simultaneously haunt the family while Erin tries to cope with the guilt of Emily's death, haunting visions, a jilted ex-boyfriend who taps into supernatural forces to enact revenge, and a family that is quickly disintegrating. Having made a break with the occult underworld, Erin struggles with her own identity as a person while dating the high school football star who is very different from her.

Carpenter writes a smart, riveting, and fantastic story with well-rounded characters and many twists and turns. He is a graphic designer and copywriter whose spare time is also devoted to creating a very popular fine art series titled Alterniverse: The Urth Chronicles.

Settle in for the night and immerse yourself into the nightmare. İt is a book you won't be able to put down until it is finished cover to cover. Sleeping afterwards, however, may be a difficult task. -C. Keith Carpenter

The novel is available online and at other locations which are listed on the website www.GhostsOfEmilyGray.com
